Many talented people in startups are promoted into manager positions early in their careers because of their technical skills, not their leadership abilities. These new managers enthusiastically take on positions of greater responsibility and often find themselves facing complicated people and performance situations. Without the experience or training that prepares them to address these issues, rising leaders take longer than necessary to solve problems, make mistakes, eventually absorb essential time from their boss's schedule—and find their confidence plunging.

In Leadership Skills for Rising Leaders, we help participants avoid many of these problems and build their capacities as leaders. We accelerate their growth by introducing essential leadership skills they can begin to use immediately.

This program is engaging and interactive. We intersperse presentations with case scenarios, exercises, and small group discussions. During the program, we introduce these key skills:

- Understanding Your Behavior Style and Those of Your Colleagues
- Emotional Intelligence
- Situational Leadership
- Effective Feedback and Coaching
- Delegating, Setting Expectations, and Holding People Accountable
- Managing Conflict/Challenging Conversations

Participants leave the workshop with a detailed plan to put their new skills into action right away. Your entire company will benefit from the new knowledge they have acquired.
